Risk/Crisis Management in Construction Projects

Monday, May 16, 2016 | 6 pm - 9 pm

Directors and officers of all organizations have exposures at common law for breach of fiduciary duty in the context of mismanagement claims, while D&Os of public companies may also face liability for violations of the federal securities laws. Increased mergers and acquisitions activity, including cross-border transactions as part of corporate tax savings strategies, have further complicated the subject of directors and officers liability. But corporations and D&Os are not alone in all this. Insurance products for directors and officers liability, and corporate liability, address these exposures and are a key component of any corporation's risk management plan. Our panel of professionals, including insurers' representatives and insureds' advocates provide a balanced perspective on present and future exposures facing directors and officers, the D&O insurance marketplace, recent legal developments and the impact of coverage defenses on claim resolution. Panel discussions include:

- Primer on D&O Liability Exposures and Coverages
- Update on U.S. Securities Litigation, Resolutions and Case Law
- Special Claims/Coverage Considerations of Insureds and Insurers
- The Dynamics of D&O "Towers" including Side "A" Coverage

This program will provide participants with an update of the legal issues in risk management associated with commercial construction in New York City and beyond, starting with the types of insurance available for construction projects, how it is obtained, who it protects, and the best practices for reviewing policies, endorsements and specifications. The panel will explain the ways to identify and understand risks, the management of risks and how to ensure proper insurance coverage and avoid surprises. We will also look at remedies for when the parties' expectations are not met.
